Hello,

Holy smoke yet again Connecticut can not curb its spending and tell the residents the truth. Hartford is th worst place for a stadium. With out question it will be a traffic nightmare to get into and out of the proposed area. At best Connecicut residents are ambivalent about sports. The stadium in New Britain is fine where it is and brings income to that town. Why take that away.

The state had a perfect chance to build a multi purpose sports center at Rentschler field but it was blown by putting in a college stadium that is barely used. That was also supposed to bring in revenue and jobs. ya right, now we are getting the same rhetoric about this new stadium. Now for the last.....Yard Goats!!!!!! how embarassing!!!!!! Connecticut is not!! rich in rail history. Only if you take into account the supreme lack if insight into the future by having destroyed all the rails that existd that could have been, should have been kept for commercial and commuter use.
